RAID CONDUCTED BY JAPANESE ON CHAPEL DISTRICT

Artillery Duel Occurs Simultaneously With Air Bombardment

AREA IS SET ABLAZE

Chinese Put Up Feeble Attempt to Bring Down Nipponese Bombers

By John Goette
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
SHANGHAI, Feb. 3.—(INS)—Twelve big Japanese planes carried out the greatest air raid on the Chapel district of Shanghai this morning since Japanese Marines were landed to occupy the native city.

At the same time Japanese and Chinese guns engaged in an artillery duel. The air bombardment started at 11:20 and lasted for forty minutes. At exactly noon the planes headed down the river for the airplane carriers.

The International News Service correspondent watched the attack from the roof of the eight story Cathay Hotel in the heart of the International Settlement.

I had a clear view of the maneuvering planes, heard the bombs explode in the densely populated native city and saw great clouds of smoke rising from burning buildings.

The planes repeatedly circled over the International Settlement en route to the Chapel district.

The Chinese put up a feeble attempt to bring down the Nipponese bombers with machine-gun fire and artillery pieces but the bombers ignored their efforts.

A heavy pall of smoke was rising above Shanghai shortly after noon from the blazing Chapel area. At noon a fresh blaze broke out behind the central postoffice, well within the International Settlement, apparently set by sparks from buildings bombed in Chapel.

From my vantage point on the roof of the hotel I could see traffic moving in the streets of the International Settlement below as if nothing was happening.

Across in the Chapel district the native population was fleeing in terror.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 3.—(INS)—Japanese warships opened a heavy bombardment of the Woosung Forts fourteen miles from the heart of Shanghai this afternoon, shortly after a dozen planes had carried out a terrific bombing attack upon Chapel, the native quarters north of the International Settlement.

As the attack upon the forts was launched the planes returned to the attack upon Chapel and Japanese Marines once again opened an onslaught against the Chinese barricades in Chapel.

Large sections of the native city appeared to be afire.

There was an unconfirmed report the Woosung Forts had been reduced.

Wealthy Lumberman Drowns; Car Skids Into River

FRENCHTOWN, N. J., Feb. 3.—Israel L. Niece, 79, a wealthy lumberman and coal dealer, was drowned when his automobile skidded on the River Road, near Point Pleasant, Pa., yesterday afternoon, and plunged down a 50-foot embankment into the Delaware River.

Three rivermen were able to recover the body by chopping a hole in the top of the coupe, and making use of a rope. It is believed the car and victim might not have been discovered for some time if it had not been for witnesses to the affair, as the machine was completely submerged.

Miss Rena Miller and Thomas Beagell, both of Pipersville, who were traveling in the opposite direction, saw the car plunge over the embankment, just missing two trees. They spread an alarm and Harold Burgess, Arthur Ridge and Roy Vansalones, rivermen of Erwinna, secured a flat-bottom boat and rowed down the swift moving stream. After they located the automobile they had considerable difficulty in extricating the body which was pinned fast in the car.

Dr. John J. Sweeney, Doylestown, Bucks county coroner, issued a permit.

Niece's son, Chester A. Niece, who operates a lumber yard at Lambertville, was notified, and he identified the victim. Besides his son, Niece is survived by his widow, Catherine.

Patrolmen of the Edison State Highway Patrol went to the scene to investigate. The winding River Road is not protected by guard rails where the tragedy occurred.

ERIE—Leap year was no joke for the girls here.

At a dance held here, in addition to purchasing the tickets, the girls were obliged to call for their escorts, buy the cigarettes and lunches and drinks and even book the dances.

And to make it even more real, the men agreed to force their girl friends to wait in the parlor until they finished dressing, like they were forced to do many times themselves.

AMERICAN FLAGSHIP ARRIVES AT WOOSUNG

Neutral Shipping Endangered By Flying Shells

SECRET CONFERENCE

By Floyd Gibbons
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright 1932 by I. N. S.)

ABOARD THE U. S. HOUSTON OFF WOOSUNG (7.06 P. M.), Feb. 3.—From this U. S. warship, flagship of the American Asiatic squadron commanded by Admiral Taylor, I am watching the Japanese bombardment at Woosung Fort, 14 miles from Shanghai.

The Houston arrived under rush orders from Manila this afternoon. She passed Woosung Fort at 1.30 p. m. and is now in the Whooogkiao River, opposite Yangtzeo. The bombardment of the fort is continuing and shells are falling around us.

The U. S. Destroyer Parrott and Bowie are moored to the dock in front of the Texaco Oil Installation down the river.

The shells falling near the Houston are supposed to be coming from Japanese cruisers steaming up and down the Yangtze River directing broadsides from their 8-inch guns against the Woosung Fort.

Due to such close range, the shells are flying over a wide area endangering neutral shipping.

Edward Cunningham, United States Consul General at Shanghai came down the river and this afternoon boarded the flagship. Official ceremonies were suspended as Cunningham was piped over the side. Admiral Taylor received him. "I am damned glad you got here," Cunningham stated.

The two retired at once to the Admiral's quarters for a secret conference over the situation.

Chicken Thief Given Parole From the Court

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 3.—Judge Calvin S. Boyer has granted a parole to Clarence Williams, of 1723 North 22d street, Philadelphia, convicted a year ago of stealing chickens from Franklin Briggs and Robert Longshore, of Woodbourne.

The parole petition was presented by Stace B. McEntee, of Doylestown. Williams was sentenced on February 2, last year, to serve not less than one and one-half years or more than three years in the Bucks County Prison. His minimum sentence has not expired, but Briggs and Longshore, from whom the chickens were stolen, joined in the petition for parole. Williams was placed on probation for the balance of the parole period, with Antonio Russo, of Bristol, as parole officer.

In equity court a hearing started before Judges Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer which involves a dispute over the title to "Villa Arms," the home of Dr. John N. Kirk, East street, Doylestown. There are two cases, one being that of Minnie K. Hubman and Dr. John N. Kirk against Frank C. Wolfe, of Allentown, and the other being that of Frank C. Wolfe against Minnie K. Hubman.

Dr. Kirk testified that he is a physician and has offices in Allentown and Newark.

This announcement was made by President Thomas B. Stockham, of Morrisville. Scout Commissioner William Burgess, Morrisville, requests that "Every Cub, Scout, Seascout, Scouter and Cubler should wear his official uniform this birthday week. When it is impossible to wear the uniform we want everyone to wear the badge of his official rank on the left lapel of his coat."

Dr. A. J. Strathie, Newtown, chairman of the educational committee, says: "The public will become familiar with the activities of our cub, scouts and seascouts through a country-wide program of window displays. The great interest that was shown during our 21st anniversary, last year, has resulted in many of our packs, troops and ships planning for more complete window displays during the 1932 scout week. It is the plan of a number of our units to show the traits of our first President, George Washington, and how closely they are being followed in our scouting objectives of character building, and citizenship training."

CITY OF SANTIAGO IS SHAKEN BY EARTHQUAKE

Over 1,000 Believed Killed; City Plunged Into Darkness

WATER IS CUT OFF

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Feb. 3.—(INS)—More than 1,000 people were believed to have been killed by an earthquake shock which shook Santiago at 2.41 a. m., today.

The city was plunged into immediate darkness and it was impossible for authorities to immediately establish the definite extent of the damage or casualties.

The piercing cries of the wounded rang out through the night as police and soldiers tried to restore a semblance of order from the chaos that reigned.

The shock lasted less than a minute. Untold hundreds were injured. The city, helpless, sent an urgent appeal to the outside world for all available doctors, nurses and medical supplies. Local medical institutions were swamped.

The first serious threat was the complete stoppage of the water supply. Authorities regarded this most seriously, since it paved the way for spread of disease unless it was repaired immediately.

Buildings were levelled throughout the city. The smaller ones, including hundreds of homes with sleeping occupants, were among the hardest hit.

Small towns in the vicinity of Santiago also were believed to have been shaken.

TO WITHDRAW FROM PACT

Geneva, Feb. 3.—(INS)—Japan is planning at the Disarmament Conference now in session here, to announce her withdrawal from the Nine-Power Pacific Pact and also form the Naval Agreement negotiated at the Washington Disarmament Conference in 1922. This will bring to an end the restrictive naval building treaties binding upon her on December 31, 1936, and permit her to embark upon any naval program she sees fit.

Unless Japan reconsiders, the Disarmament conference, which opened here yesterday in the shadow of the Sino-Japanese fighting at Shanghai, will certainly end in dismal failure.

"Is it possible that Japan plans to withdraw from the Nine Power Pact and the Washington Treaty?" was asked a member of the Disarmament Delegation today.

"It is not only possible, but quite probable," the Japanese replied.

The statement will be issued in Washington. There, Republican leaders have waited for weeks for Senator Davis to publicly define his views on prohibition and threatened to support another senatorial candidate unless he declared strongly in favor of amending or repealing the Federal prohibition laws.

NOT NECESSARY TO DISTURB THE CANAL'S BEAUTY

Progress Can Be Met Without Marring Attractiveness

BRIDGES QUESTION

Spans Can Be Strengthened Without Altering Appearance

It has been decided that it will not be necessary to disturb the general beauty of the old Delaware Division Canal to keep apace with progress.

This is the principal conclusion reached by a committee of citizens, including residents of the community traversed by the stream. They met Monday night at the home of Morris L. Cooke, former Director of Public Works of Philadelphia, Chestnut Hill.

Fear that the beauty of the canal which penetrates many historic spots would be destroyed was aroused early last year. A bill was introduced in the Legislature authorizing transfer of the land bordering the canal from the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. to the State. Later Governor Pinchot promised the picturesque features of the stream from Yardley to Raubsville, would not be disturbed.

The governor christened the section "Roosevelt Park" during an address at Washington Crossing, last October. The Pennsylvania Parks Association took an active part in a movement to preserve the beauty of the land adjoining the canal, and a committee was appointed by its president, Ellwood B. Chapman, to arrange for a survey of the area.

W. Purves Taylor, engineer, who was principal assistant to William H. Connell, chief of the Bureau of Highways during the Blankenburg administration, was selected to make the survey.

His report included plans for utilizing the park for recreational purposes and for developing it along lines which would preserve its natural and primitive beauty. The report was adopted by the committee. It will be sent to the Governor, Secretary of Highways and the Secretary of Forests and Waters.

The report indicates that the biggest problem to be considered is the preservation of the quaint camel-back bridges which span the canal.

But this obstacle virtually has been met. Announcement was made at the meeting that the State Highway Department has adopted a design which will strengthen these spans without altering their appearance.

There are seven of these bridges along the main highway paralleling the canal between Washington Crossing and Raubsville. Each span will be increased to a width of 18 feet and the flooring supported by 18-inch "I" beams.

The height of each bridge will be decreased two and one-half feet, leaving six feet head room over the water. This will be ample for the passing of barges. Only those craft used for pleasure outings and in connection with maintenance of the canal will be permitted in the stream.

The abutments of the bridges will be broadened on each side, placing the span on a slight angle, thus eliminating the sharp turns now necessary from the road.

Plans for the changes have been worked out under direction of Mr. Lewis, secretary of highways. The committee endorsed the action of the Highway Department and commended Mr. Lewis for his interest.

Announcement was made that any plans for any change in the highway bordering the canal has been definitely abandoned.

George W. Norris, Governor of the Federal Reserve District and a resident of Gwynedd Valley, was appointed chairman of a committee to continue the work of the organization. J. Carroll Molloy, Doylestown, was appointed. (Continued on Page 4)

"GETTIN' EVEN"

(By "The Stroller")
Some individual, apparently one who the "Stroller" has "hit" at some time or other, saw an opportunity to get even yesterday when he read the weather report in the Courier.

The report, through a slip-up, was not changed from the day previous and consequently read in rather a strange manner.

The one who had a score to even clipped the report and then neatly typed above it: "Ain't this something for the 'Stroller'?"

So, we hereby make acknowledgement of the receipt of the clipping.

PROMOTIONAL MATERIAL

A big New York department store employs an expert who is both a physician and psychiatrist to keep tab on its employees. It wants to find out as early as possible why some persons on its payroll do not produce; why some get discouraged and resign; why some remain in a habitual state of mind which makes them difficult to work with and unpleasant for the public to do business with. These are important questions for the employees and for those who pay them.

Through all the years poets and philosophers have been telling in varying phrases that every man is the architect of his own destiny. That message was never so important as it is today under conditions of highly organized business relationships. A man with an axe in the woods or with a plow in the back field could be ill-tempered without much detriment to anybody but himself. But a worker in a department with several hundred or thousand others may be a veritable monkey wrench in the works.

The program of the psychiatrist mentioned above includes two phases: He studies the employees to discover misfits, and he keeps close watch for "promotional material." That is a good thought for the average man to keep in mind. He may be a misfit or he may be promotional material. The difference can be wholly in his attitude.

WHEN TO ADVERTISE

An advertising expert attributes some of the business depression to inadequate newspaper advertising, a condition that is always aggravated by curtailed industrial production and the first evidences of increasing unemployment.

He is of the opinion that by far the most important source of waste in advertising is quitting, it being his belief that the losses sustained by American advertisers who have quit during the past 50 years total as large as the cost of American participation in the World War. He further observes:

"Generally speaking, far too little money is spent for advertising. Popular opinion regarding the really great appropriations of a few of the more important advertisers would indicate the reverse, but it is a plain fact that advertisers, in the aggregate, limit themselves to nominal amounts."

Merchants and manufacturers who know when and how to advertise increased their advertising space with the first rumors of "hard times." They have not been among those who have reported business losses during the present winter.

If all dreams were to come true nightmares might come too true too.

The way of the transgressor is especially hard on our faith in laws.

Liberty is safe for one man only when he is willing to grant other men theirs.

American voices in the talking pictures annoy the British, according to some London critics who urge the five-power conference to take up the whole subject of nasal reduction.

"The GAY BANDIT of the BORDER"

by TOM GILL

Copyright 1931 by International Magazine Co., Inc. — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Young and handsome Ted Radcliffe arrives at Verdi, a Mexican border town, as the search for "El Coyote," the notorious masked bandit, is at its height. "El Coyote" avenges the outrages perpetrated by the wealthy and powerful Paco Morales against the peons. Ted learns from Bob Harkness, his late father's friend, that Morales was responsible for Radcliffe's father's failure, but Bob urges him not to make an enemy of Morales as he has other plans. Ted is attracted to Morales' beautiful niece, Adela. "El Coyote" sends his lieutenant to urge the ranchers to join him in overthrowing Morales. Jito, Morales' ward, warns him he will lose power unless "El Coyote" is killed. At Morales' fiesta, Ted bluntly asks his host if he benefited by his father's ruin. Morales replies that Ted's father was his friend. Jito and an Indian finish a horse race together, but Morales awards the decision to his ward.

CHAPTER XVII

Jito had reined in his horse before the judges' stand, his black eyes burning with the exultation of the race. His lips were still parted with the snarl of contest, and his great chest rose and fell. Jito, it was evident, was very happy. It was as if he said: "Look, I am Jito. I conquer in all things." And knotted in his wet scarf was the rose of Adela.

Silently Radcliffe watched him. The young Mexican seemed a very gallant figure there in the evening sunlight, his thick hair tossed, shirt open, sitting his horse as if a very part of the animal. And, catching Ted's glance, Don Bob whispered: "An untamed centaur of the desert. But see his eyes as he looks up at Adela."

They were the eyes of a loyal dog, a lover's eyes, too, but in their glance was something of the wildness of an untamed and untamable thing.

Leaning over the railing, Adela extended her hand, and Jito raised it to his lips. "A los pies de tu." He murmured the old courtly Spanish phrase, and his voice was the voice of one speaking to some holy being. A little throb of pain caught Radcliffe as he watched. Children of the desert, those two, sharing a world where he yet walked an alien. Then he smiled and, reaching down, grasped Jito's hand.

"Well done," he said. "You are a true brother of the North Wind."

Jito's delighted smile grew broader. "A thousand thanks to the big Americano."

He felt the strength of Radcliffe's grasp and nodded in approval as he sat his horse carelessly, while about him clustered his vaqueros. Slowly Jito's own huge fingers tightened and Radcliffe tried to straighten, but the Mexican's hand held his own now with a steel clasp. Again Jito's eyes were gleaming.

"Men say," he smiled lazily up, "that the big Americano is a great wrestler; that he has a hug like the mountain grizzly. It would be good sometime to see which of us should first taste the desert's dust in such a contest."

Ted felt the girl's eyes upon him. He forced his lips to smile. "Whenever you like, Jito mio," he replied easily.

"Buena. Let it be now, then. Let us see if there is one on the border stronger than Jito."

Morales interposed with a frown. "Silence. This gentleman is our guest." He turned to Ted. "Jito has the manners of a goat. Success to him is like strong drink. You will forgive him?"

Again Jito smiled. "But surely so strong a man must be glad to test his strength."

Ted was neither looking at Morales nor listening to the other's words. That iron grip from below was pulling him still lower over the rail. Some answering spark kindled within him. It was as if two naked souls had recognized beyond all uncertainty the presence of an enemy. And suddenly hot blood surged to his head as he stood there looking down at the Mexican's challenging eyes. Placing his free hand on the rail, he vaulted quickly over and stood beside Jito's horse. Then without effort, he reached up, wound his arm about the Mexican's waist and pulled him slowly from the saddle.

Radcliffe, darting in, caught Jito, already off balance, and with a quick thrust and jerk, threw him sprawling.

They stood face to face now, in the center of that crowded, hushed circle, directly beneath the little group in the stand. Alert, poised, holding each other's eyes, still smiling warily, As the Mexican stepped back, Ted threw his coat aside.

"Ready?" he asked.

Jito raised his black eyes. "Si, always ready."

They swung together with a thud of straining flesh, bent heads pressed down against each other's shoulder, sinewy arms moving slowly up and down, seeking some point of weakness. Like great statues they bulked against the sunset, tense, waiting, almost motionless.

Without warning Jito lunged, throwing the weight of his body against Radcliffe, and circling his waist with both arms, lifted his adversary bodily into the air. Ted's own arms locked about the Mexican's neck, and his muscles grew into steel bands as he forced all his strength into that punishing, killing neck-hold. The cords on Jito's throat stood out, his breath whistled. Mercilessly the hold tightened as Ted slipped his right hand forward, locking his arms together.

Like a cat Jito jerked backward, turning as he fell, striving to end that killing hold, hoping to drive Ted's body into the earth beneath him. As they swayed backward Radcliffe, releasing the Mexican, leaped aside, then, darting in, caught Jito, already off balance, and with a quick thrust and a jerk, threw him sprawling on his back. A clean fall. From Morales's herdsmen came a hiss of dismayed surprise as they saw their chieftain in the dust.

Ted stepped forward and, grasping Jito's hand, raised him to his feet.

For a moment the young Mexican looked uncertainly at his antagonist. Then he laughed and felt tenderly his twisted neck. "By the cross, you are a strong man, señor. No one else in all Mexico could do that. And yet even that—it was a trick, it was not strength." His dark eyes again appraised him. "Yes, sometime it would be interesting to lock us both in the same room and see which of us would unlock the door. That would be worth while, eh, amigo mio?"

Radcliffe turned away. "It might have possibilities, Jito. Sometime when we're not too busy. But not tonight."

Like truant schoolboys, both men watched Adela and Don Bob approach. Something sparkled in the girl's eyes that might have been anger or amusement. Don Bob was trying not to smile.

"I am sure my uncle's peons thank you for a pleasant afternoon," came the quiet voice of Adela. "Are there any other little games you and Jito would like to play before we go?"

Jito looked once into the girl's eyes, then turned like a beaten dog. Bob's smile broadened. Ted gazed down at his ruffled, desert-stained clothes, and suddenly it came over him that he had played the part of a fool before this calm-eyed girl. His face flushed and he looked for his fellow culprit, but Jito had disappeared. Rusefully Ted picked up his coat.

"I'm sorry. I'm whatever kind of imbecile you want to call me, but please don't slay me outright."

In silence they walked toward the roadster and once, looking quickly up, Ted surprised the faintest smile on the girl's face.

"Thank God for that," he said. "I've been afraid you were thinking of cutting me to five dances tonight."

She shook her head. "I shouldn't dare. Instead I'll probably have to dance all evening with you rather than trust you for a minute out of my sight. You might be overcome with desire to pitch quarts with the stable boy or—"

"Or challenge the tenor drummer to six fast rounds," suggested Ted. Then he added: "Really, I'm sorry. It all came so suddenly. He was so confident and so sure. And the next minute we were at it, and now I'm all sackcloth and ashes."

$5,000 is NEWS

Well, the old Bell Creek bridge washed out last night! Jim Daly, the traveling salesman, let the news drop casually.

His customer did not miss the point. Banning, of the Brand Iron Works, leaped at the tidbit. "The coal company's trouble? Man, that's news!" He grasped his telephone and worked fast.

In a minute or two he had permission to bid on a new bridge. By telephone he secured the specifications—consulted engineers—put the draughting room to work.

Finally he leaned back. "We'll have the estimate by noon—$5,000 at least—and the job's ours, Jim, thanks to you and the telephone!" He laughed and clapped Daly on the shoulder. "And now what can I do for you?" he said.

By TELEPHONE you can do business in points 150 miles away for 30 cents—after 3:30 P. M. for only 50 cents!

PITTSBURGH.—After admitting he had borrowed the automobile of a roomer in his grandmother's home at night for "joy rides," Clark Volbrecht, 17, was fined $5 here.

Paul Alexis, the roomer, reported to police that someone was using his automobile while he worked at night. Police kept a watch on the garage and arrested young Volbrecht.

When Alexis refused to prosecute, Magistrate T. D. Jones levied the small fine.

SCHEDULE TWO COURT CONTESTS FOR TONIGHT

Tonight on the Hibernians' floor two interesting basketball tilts will be played. In the first game, the Third Ward five will meet the A. O. H. Reserves and in the second fray, the Mulligan All-Stars will meet the Ramblers.

Bristol Ramblers is a newly-organized team and will make their debut against Mulligan boys. The five is composed of John and Gene Spadacino as forwards; Galzerano, center; and Alta and Tulio, guards. The quintet at one time or other were members of the Bristol High School team.

John and Larry will be at the forward positions for the Mulligans, with Edward at the pivot position and Maurice and Joe at the guarding stations. The opening tap-off is scheduled for eight o'clock.

Tullytown A. A. will seek revenge on its basketball court tonight when it plays the fast Meadowbrook Club, of Trenton, which defeated them earlier in the season.

The Jersey team helped Tullytown to usher in its basketball campaign and hung a 45-35 defeat on the locals. Since then the A. A. have been going at a fast clip and things look brighter for tonight's contest.

Two stars of the Tullytown outfit will be missing in the fray. Gene Lawler and "Jimmy" Lake are both on the injured list and will not see action. Their positions will probably be filled by George Dougherty and Edmund Dugan. "Eddie" Roe, "Hun" Rodgers and "Chuckie" Connors will make up the remainder of the five.

In Meadowbrook's line-up will be: Goodwin and Lawrence, forwards; Beetle, center; and Birch and Coleman, guards.

In the first game of the night, the Tullytown Reserves will meet the Bristol Aces. In the opening game of the season, the Aces scored a 33-16 triumph over the Reserves.

Tap-off will take place at eight o'clock.

In the second game of the night, the Cardinal and Gray quintet took Southampton into camp by the score of 39-14 on the home court last night. The Bristol High fives defeated the Blue and Gray sextet, 29-25.

Although the Cardinal and Gray quintet's offense and defense showed an improvement, their shooting was erratic. Bristol's sextet displayed a decided betterment in the entire game.

Hart was high point gatherer for Bristol with five double-deckers. For the visitors, Tomlinson was high scorer with one twin-pointer and a quartet of foul goals.

Captain Whyatt, with a quartet of double-deckers and fouls, was high point gatherer for the local sextet. Beans looped four double-deckers and eleven singles for Southampton.

This game is the last one before February graduation, and also the last game for the following seniors: Girls—Captain Whyatt, Di Lissio, I. Nills, and Unruh; boys—Captain Herman, Pico, Hart, Tentilucci, and Britton. All have had successful seasons and will be greatly missed by both teams.

10 Commandments for 1932 Brides Given by Judge

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3.—(INS)—Ten commandments for 1932 leap year brides have been laid down by Superior Judge Thomas F. Graham, nationally known as the "great reconciler."

Judge Graham has patched up hundreds of marital quarrels in the divorce court during his 31 years on the bench.

His commandments for would-be brides follow:

1. Select your husband as you would your wedding dress, not for a slick surface but for wearing qualities.
2. Look before you leap—then don't leap.
3. First make sure you love him, then pop the question.
4. Ask yourself if you are willing to darn his socks, mend and wash his shirts and cook his meals, and if the answer is "yes" you may be sure you love him.
5. Know thy man as thou knowest thyself.
6. Be sure you love him as you love yourself.
7. Be ready for storms and be not afraid when they come.
8. Be resolved to make a home for him so pleasant he will be reluctant to leave in the morning and eager to return at night.
9. Be sure that you can be interested in your husband's interests, and then see that you are, always.
10. Remember that marriage is a 50-50 proposition and be prepared to play the game.

City of Santiago Is Shaken by Earthquake

The city. It was not immediately known whether any of them were among the casualties.

Santiago is situated in the middle of the mountainous southern coast of Cuba, at the eastern end of the Sierra Meistra mountain range.

Santiago, the second largest city in Cuba, has a population of 150,000. It was first reported that volcanic disturbances in the neighboring mountains accompanied the quake.

Luckily telephone and telegraph lines to the rest of Cuba were not affected, and it was through these Santiago sent out plans for help.

This was not Santiago's first earthquake, and, coincidentally, its most serious shocks have come just at this time of year.

The city was completely destroyed on Feb. 1, 1659. At that time Queen Isabella II, of Spain, to whom Cuban colonists owed allegiance, gave an amount equal to one million dollars for relief for the victims.

On the same day five years earlier a severe shock had shaken the city. Other quakes occurred here in 1761, 1766, 1827, and 1852.
